

The Superhero Saga: Spiderman and the spidey senses

By day... you are Spiderman. Swinging across the city on your weblines, guided by your spidey sense, that allows you to travel at high speeds hundreds of feet above street level with minimal concentration, confident your weblines will find secure anchor points. How exactly do you use your spidey senses? Simple, you listen to the inner, subconscious feeling implanted into your blood after being bitten by a radioactive spider. Because of this bite, you have superpowers to feel when trouble will occur, and your spidey senses guide you to the scene of the crime.

Listening and responding to your inner, subconscious spidey senses is like communicating with the Spirit of God. Because Jesus shed his blood, we have the greatest guide built into us. Speaking through everything, it is our responsibility to pay attention, listen and discern what the Spirit is saying through His perspective. In order to listen and understand His perspective, we must become real and transparent with ourselves.

Recently, I became determine to get in tune with my spidey senses. Of course, I've always believed in Jesus, trusted God, and known to communicate with the Spirit, but I couldn't hear His voice as well as I knew I should. At this point, it was time to become real and transparent with myself. I discovered that I was caught in self-deception and realizing it was difficult for my pride to admit. My mind was full of false belief and confusion.

In these moments of transparency, I had to allow lies I believed about myself die, so the truth could live. Allowing the truth to live is when I began sense and hear the Spirit clearer than I had ever heard Him before. A lot of the voices of confusion began to fade away, and I could see the real me. The fading away of those voices allowed me to have a real and intimate relationship with the Spirit.

Now, I know I am in tune with my spidey senses. The more transparent I am, the better my relationship with the Spirit becomes. When I question an area of my life, it is much easier to discern the truth because my mind is at peace. Knowing truth and being real and transparent with my self is an indescribable, self-empowering feeling.

As Christians, I believe, it is time to become real and transparent with the lies and self-deception that could keep us from the truth. The Spirit of God allows us to live a life of a superhero, aware and confident. People without the Spirit should see the undeniable power we have and desire it. Every moment we should live life listening and responding to our spidey senses, that inner voice deep within. The sense of confidence that makes us feel untouchable, like we can swing from building to building effortlessly.
